The flame trees are flaming everywhere on TKU campus where more than 7000 graduates, including those from Lanyang Campus, with the blessings of faculty and students, are about to soar to great heights after The Parting Song. The 2009 graduation ceremony officially begins at Shao-mo Memorial Gymnasium today (June 13) at 10:00 am. The graduation theme this year is “The Most Authentic TKU—Qualities Guaranteed,” and we hope that with the affirmation of TKU’s winning of the NQ Award, all graduates will stride bravely forward in their new life journey.

All graduates begin the Campus Parade as the prologue of the official ceremony, starting from the Student Activity Center, through Poster Street to the Fu Yuan Japanese Garden finally arrive at Five-Tiger Steps where they are welcomed by TKU Founder Clement C. P. Chang, President Flora C. I. Chang and faculty members in a row. President Chang chairs the Ceremony, and both Founder Chang and the General Director of TKU Alumni Association, ROC, Ching-nan Chen deliver a speech. The valedictory speeches are delivered by Mass Communication senior Bei-yu Chen, Information and Communication seniors Hsin-hua Chao and Hsin-yi Cheng who take faculty and students to nostalgic aftertastes of the most memorial moments of their four years of TKU life. When “The Parting Song” starts, the TKU Chorus will lead the graduates to sing it together with full blessings.

The Graduation Site reserves 700 seats for students’ parents to attend the ceremony. The Site is open from 8:50 to 9:50 a.m. for parents until all the 700 seats are taken.
