

The Drama Club End-of-Semester Stage Performance

英文電子報

The TKU Drama Club recently held a series of stage plays to showcase the fruits of their hard work throughout the semester.

The first of the plays, 'Death Knock', portrays the life of a successful businesswoman, who, while at the peak of her career, is visited by a peevish God of Death. Just as her life is about to be taken away, the businesswoman initiates a game of cards with the God of Death. The odds at stake: one more day to live. The director, second year Public Administration student Wang Xiwen, said that she hoped, through the play, to convey a humorous and slightly satirical portrayal of people's attitudes to death.
